Four divorces were granted by Judge William M. Maltbie at the short calendar session of the Windham county superior court held Friday morning at the court rooms in Putnam. Two witnesses were heard in a fifth divorce case, which was continued until next week Friday in order that additional evidence may be secured. Two of the couples, who were legally separated, were residents of Putnam, one was from Woodstock and the other from Killingly. In the list of uncontested divorces there appeared fifteen cases, which established a record for a single short calendar session in Windham county.

The first case heard was that of Robert E. Harris of Woodstock vs. Beulah J. Harris. Harris was represented by Torrey, Geisler & Miron, and in court the questioning was done by Attorney Charles L. Torrey. Harris testified that he was married to Beulah J. Harris of Putnam on November 30, 1916, and that in March of the following year his wife left him and went to her parents in Putnam. Before going she had told him that she would live with him if he would sell his place in Woodstock and move to Putnam, but that she would not stay with him at her home in that town. The witness testified that four times he has seen his wife and tried to have her return with him, but on all occasions she refused. He further stated that in October, 1918, he was arrested in Woodstock on a charge of non-support, but that he was found not guilty. At that time both he and his wife were represented by lawyers in the justice court, and an attempt was made by counsel to reconcile him and his wife. Charles M. Perrin, a justice of the peace in Woodstock, was called to the stand, and testified that he knew Harris was not living with his wife. The divorce was granted by Judge Maltbie on the grounds of desertion.

Glen Dew vs. Agnes B. Dew was the second case heard. Dew was represented by Attorney Torrey of Torrey, Geisler & Miron. When asked by the witness stand and testified that he was married on August 27, 1914 and had lived in Putnam since October of that same year. He is employed by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. His wife lived with him until March 3, 1917, when she left and went to the home of his brother in East Hartford. For several days previous to her going she had, Dew told in court, said that she was going to leave him. When asked by counsel what reasons she had given for her intended departure, Dew said she told him that she couldn't stand it to have him work nights, and also that she was tired of living with him anyway. Dew said that when she left she was told by him that the house would be kept open for her for 20 days. As a matter of fact Dew said he did not close it for 47 days. After his wife left him Dew enlisted with the railway engineers and was soon sent to France where he was kept for nearly three years. During his service he received one letter from his wife, which he answered. Dew believes that his wife is now living at her old home in Oxford, Mass.

Mrs. Charles Dow of East Hartford, wife of Dow's brother, testified that on the third of March, 1917, Dow's wife came to her home. This was the day that she left her husband in Putnam. She remained one week in Hartford, and then went away. Witness stated that Mrs. Dow told her that she had left her husband in Putnam.

Howard James of Putnam testified that Dow had not been living with his wife.
